Let countries be permanent markets for each others produce; let their reciprocal relations be such that they cannot be broken without inflicting on each other the double suffering of privation and a glut of commodities; and they will no longer stand in need of naval armaments, which ruin them, and overgrown armies, which crush them; the peace of the world will not then be compromised by the caprice of a Thiers or of a Palmerston; and war will disappear for want of what supports it, for want of resources, inducements, pretexts, and popular sympathy. I am quite aware that I shall be reproached (it is the fashion of the day), with basing the fraternity of nations on mens personal interest--vile, prosaic selfinterest. Better far, it may be thought, that it should have had its basis in charity, in love, even in a little...
